Eligibility: The Judicial Internship Program at the Supreme Court offers advanced undergraduates and graduating seniors who have interests in law, management, and social sciences a unique opportunity to gain exposure to the field of judicial administration through work in the Office of the Counselor to the Chief Justice. Interns work eight-hour days, five days a week. Thus, other employment is not feasible.

Judicial Interns perform several routine but important office tasks, which include summarizing news articles and preparing memoranda and correspondence. Interns also conduct background research for speeches and briefings provided to visiting foreign dignitaries.

Additionally, interns may participate in the diverse research projects conducted by the Supreme Court Fellow and the Counselor. These projects require interns to gather, assemble and synthesize information from a wide range of sources. Such assignments demand experience with office and library resources, the ability to work under time constraints, strict attention to detail, creative thinking, and editorial skills.

Award: The internship is unpaid. Depending on funding, a $1,000 scholarship may be available based on the following criteria:

- Interns must successfully complete the internship.

- Within one year of completing the internship, students must return to an undergraduate program or enroll in a graduate or professional degree program.
- Interns may receive academic credit through special arrangement with their college or university and consultation with the Supreme Court Fellow.

Deadline: Varies by session.

Soros Justice Fellowship

Contact: The Soros Justice Fellowships, Contact Unknown, sorosjusticefellowships@opensocietyfoundations.org,
<https://www.opensocietyfoundations.org/grants/soros-justice-fellowships>

Eligibility: There are three fellowship opportunities: Advocacy Fellowship, Media Fellowships, Youth Activist Fellowships.

All projects must, at a minimum, relate to one or more of the following U.S. criminal justice reform goals: reducing mass incarceration, challenging extreme punishment, and promoting fairness and accountability in our systems of justice. Please carefully review the complete guidelines for more details on the specific requirements for each category of fellowships.

The program does NOT fund the following: enrollment for degree or nondegree study at academic institutions, including dissertation research projects that address criminal justice issues outside the United States (applicants themselves, however, can be based outside the United States, as long as their work directly relates to a U.S. issue) lobbying activities.

Those interested in the fellowship should first download and review the complete fellowship guidelines. Applicants are required to submit a letter of intent (LOI) of no more than two pages, single spaced, that describes the proposed project. A resume or bio should also accompany the LOI (along with a work sample for Media applicants). From the initial pool of LOIs, we will select a limited number of applicants to submit full proposals.

Full proposals are accepted by invitation only. Applications for all of the fellowships described above (Advocacy, Media, Youth Activist) must be submitted online (the online system will begin accepting materials on September 9, 2016). Applicants who are uncertain whether some aspect of their proposed project fits within the parameters of the fellowships guidelines or whether the project is otherwise likely to be of interest may submit an email inquiry. The email should provide a brief (no more than 200 words) description of the proposed project, as well as some background information on the applicant.

Award: Funding ranges from $58,700 to $110,250.
